

Importance of Data in Providing Quality Assistance

Description

This session will present an evaluation of Colorado hazardous waste compliance data and how Colorado has used this relatively easy data evaluation to better target compliance assistance and to construct better compliance assistance tools.

Goals/Outcomes

To show that, with relatively little work, existing data from compliance programs can (and should) be evaluated to better guide compliance assistance efforts.

Key Questions

- ☐ What are the aspects of existing compliance data that are important to providing quality compliance assistance?
- ☐ How should the data be evaluated and how sophisticated does the evaluation need to be?
- ☐ What are some examples of improvements in compliance assistance tools and delivery that result from “smart” compliance assistance?

Presenter

Kathy Hotovec, Hazardous Waste Compliance Assistance Lead, Colorado Department of Public Health and Environment (Kathy.Hotovec@state.co.us)
